...learning with locals

Levi Wilson

What does “reconciliation” mean to Galiano and its peoples?

An SFU graduate, Levi is currently studying to be a Social Studies educator. He is a member of the Gitga’at First Nation through his grandmother’s line, though he grew up on Galiano among his grandfather’s family, descendants of the Lamalcha First Nation.

This presentation will explore “reconciliation,” and what this idea could mean for Galiano and the SGI. By sharing understandings of our local history, perhaps we may begin to open pathways that can lead us towards a future of collective integrity.
